2.4	3.9	Eastport, Maine Town Line	Eastport, Maine is the town where - back in the 1930's Roosevelt wanted to 'harness the power of the ocean tides' to create electricity. The project did get a good start - and the Gov't. built 4 homes for the engineers on Redoubt Hill (built like fortresses). Something stopped the project and it never got any further - which really is a shame because the hydro plant would be producing tremendous amounts of electricity were it working today. The tides in Eastport run approx. 26' - twice each day - and thats a lot of movement and power.	4.7	7.6
3.2	5.1	Look to your left	You'll see Deer Island, New Brunswick - a beautiful vista across the Passamaquoddy Bay!  At the top of the hill-, in Quoddy village-near the big factory you'll see the sign to Second Chance Saloon - - terrific hamburgers among other things.	3.9	6.3
